The defendant EFTSAKIS was alleged to have served in the village of Aghios Ilias (in Ilia) as officer commanding a detachment during the German occupation of Greece.

In April 1944, he established himself with his detachment in the above mentioned village and proceeded to plunder cereals and other articles of value belonging to the people of the village (particularly of Ger. Loukatos and E. Kalioumis).

When retreating from the village with his detachment, he placed mines in the fields of the villagers of Aghios Ilias, from the explosions of which the following have been killed: George Drokos and his wife; E. Tsaknakis; Nicolas Charsalepoglou; Ioannis Vlahos, and others.

The placing of these mines in the fields had no military object whatever, the only aim it had was the murder of innocent Greek cultivators.
